Non-Jews In N. Y. Don Star Of David At Service For Jews Of Hungary

Protestants, Catholics and Jews of Hungarian birth and ancestry wore the six-pointed star of David in a service of intercession for the persecuted Jews of Hungary, held at the First Magyar Reformed Church of the City of New York, 344 East Sixty-ninth Street.

The service, conducted in the English and Hungarian languages, was recorded by the U.S. Office of War Information, which broadcast it to the people of Hungary through the British Broadcasting Company in London and an Algiers radio station.

Midway in the sermon by Dr. Geza Takaro, pastor of the church, ushers distributed large arm bands imprinted with the star of David. Dr. Takaro asked the worshippers to help their neighbors pin the insignia to their left sleeves and to wear them as symbols of honor rather than as the stigma of shame which the star has become in Hungary.

He further asked the congregation not to discard the arm bands at the end of the day but to preserve them to be worn with pride on similar occasions until the liberation of Hungarian Jews is completed.

"God created the entire human nation with one blood," Dr. Takaro said in Hungarian. "The skin may be white, brown, yellow or black but the blood is always red . . . and because of it every people has a right to liberty."

The congregation was addressed in English by Louis Toth, professor emeritus at Cornell University, one of the organizers of the service, who said:

"We are here to show that there are those in America who do not forget the Hungarian people, who do not forget the Hungarian traditions, who trample on all the human principles of the constitution of Hungary and who violate every liberal Hungarian law which we knew before we left our native land."

"We shall not rest," Mr. Toth continued, "until we of Hungarian flesh and blood shall be able to lift our bowed heads again, and that can not be until every one of those men who are now besmirching the good name of the Hungarian people will receive the kind of punishment that the world will not soon forget: the punishment of common, ordinary murderers."

Almost 500 persons crowded the little church for the services. The forty-sixth Psalm was read by Dr. Takaro and the eightieth and nineteenth Psalms were sung by the congregation.

Messages were read from Senator Robert F. Wagner, Mayor F.

CHALUTZIM KILLED IN BRITISH HOSTEL

A hostel in which were Jewish refugees was hit by a bomb recently and five were killed. They were all members of Hechalutz d'Anglia, and their names are Herbert Alpern, Gitta Gluechmann, Harry Kah, Hans Mohr, and Klara Rubenfeld. They arrived in England five years ago as refugees from Germany and Austria, intending to go later to Palestine.

Miss L. H. Lewis, the secretary of the Jewish Home of Rest, lost her life in a recent "flying bomb" incident. She had also been warden of the Manchester Corporation Nursery at Sandley, and nurse at the Manchester Jewish Hospital.

Poles Fail To Start Army Inquiry On Bias

There would appear to be some mystery surrounding the failure of the Polish Commission in London, England, to start its inquiry into the charges of anti-Semitic propaganda in the Polish Army. This Commission, says the London Jewish Chronicle, was set up several weeks ago after a number of Jewish soldiers had left the Polish Army as a protest against the anti-Semitism to which they were subjected.

It was announced at the time that the Polish National Council had elected six of its members, including the two Jewish representatives, as a special Commission to inquire into all the charges made by the Jewish soldiers.

The Commission, under the Chairmanship of Dr. Ciolkosz, the Polish Socialist leader, was to gather evidence and examine some two hundred witnesses to establish whether the charges were correct, and if so, to recommend that the culprits be punished. The Polish Government announced that no obstacles would be placed in the way of the Commission examining all relevant documents and calling any witness it might choose.

Several weeks have elapsed and the Commission has not seriously settled down to work, although it was announced that it was to proceed to Scotland and to other centres where Polish soldiers are stationed. Preparations for departure were actually made. But suddenly the visit was called off, no reason for this decision being given.

According to one version, the cancellation was due to the failure of a "British observer," who was to accompany the Commission, to be appointed by the General Staff of the Polish High Command.

1,200 Rumanian Refugees Settled in Palestine

Twelve-hundred and eight Jewish refugees from Rumania, recently arrived in Palestine on five steamers. Funds for the transportation of these refugees were provided by the Joint Distribution Committee.

Among the Rumanian refugees reaching Palestine were 190 children, including 119 orphans who had escaped from Transnistria, the border region between Rumania and Russia where more than 180,000 Jews had perished during the Nazi occupation of that territory. Eliezer Kaplan said that all the children were admitted to educational institutions and agricultural settlements established by the Jewish Agency, where they will be looked after by Youth Aliyah, the organization responsible for the maintenance of children. A total of 251 refugees were placed in intermediary workers' centers; 20 in agricultural settlements; and 297 women in hostels set aside for female agricultural workers.

Industrial plants turning out war material for the Allied armies absorbed 190 refugees, while 400 others received private jobs or were assisted by relatives. Special measures have been taken to care for the aged and for those who are physically unable to work.

"All needy persons are exempted in our hostels and are subsequently granted subsidies for preliminary establishment and in certain cases more than $200 each has been set aside for families to facilitate their adjustment," Mr. Kaplan said. He reported that more than $60,000 had already been spent for the reception and adjustment of the 1,208 recent arrivals from Rumania.

The settlement of the newcomers has been rendered more difficult by the general housing shortage. To meet this problem, the Jewish Agency has undertaken to construct 100 small houses for the Rumanian refugees. Mr. Kaplan said. He declared that the Jewish Agency was doing its utmost with the limited resources at its disposal emphasizing that the Jewish Agency was doing its utmost with the limited resources at its disposal emphasizing that

CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW LIMITS SIZE DURING SUMMER

Larger issues of the Canadian Jewish Review have made it necessary to limit its size at times during the past few weeks to conform to government regulations with regard to the conservation of newsprint.

No Trace Left Of 1,200 Jews At Dutch Camp

An underground Dutch newspaper reports that all Jews have disappeared from the notorious Vught concentration camp, except those who are forced to work for Philips (the radio manufacturers) and those who are diamond workers.

Over 1,200 Jewish men, women, and children were transported to Germany on the morning of November 15, the paper reports. They had been told that they could take clothes and food with them, but when they were lined up for departure at 4 a.m. they were robbed of all their clothes and possessions. In most cases the men received one set of underwear and some received socks. The women received nothing, not even underwear, and were insulted by S.S. men.

All including the lame and sick, were transported in cattle trucks. The journey took five days and five nights, and it is believed that many many died during the journey.

War Claims

Germans accused of crimes against the Jews of Europe should be tried by tribunals of the Jewish people where the alleged crimes were committed, Dr. Joseph Tenenbaum proposed in his first statement as president of the American Federation of Polish Jews.

Speaking at a luncheon in the Hotel Astor, New York, Dr. Tenenbaum outlined the federation's plans for participation in the post-war rehabilitation of surviving Jews in Poland. Other proposals included reparations from the German people for "the suffering, humiliation, loss of property, position and political status suffered by the Jews," as well as "restitution and reconstruction of all Jewish communal property destroyed or damaged by the Germans in the form of German labor, German services and their equivalents."

On the involved problem of Jewish property that has gone

Rome Rabbi To Broadcast From Freed Synagogue

A special thanksgiving service from the Temple Israelitico, Rome's famed synagogue, will be beamed to the United States on Sunday, July 23, 1:15 to 1:30 P.M., E. W. T., in a program presented in Canada over the C. B. C. by the American Jewish Committee, in collaboration with the National Broadcasting Company. The program, to be carried over the NBC network, will be the first Jewish broadcast from an Allied-liberated territory.

The Chief Rabbi of Italy, Anton Zolli, will conduct the services. A cantor and a girls' choir will participate. The arrangements for the program were made by Ralph Howard, NBC correspondent attached to the American Fifth Army.

Rabbi Zolli, who is 73, had been in hiding, at one time with a Catholic family, during the nine months that the Nazis directly controlled Rome. He was one of the some 4,000 Jews of Rome who outwitted the Gestapo and escaped deportation. Nearly 5,000 of Rome's Jewish population were

Jewish Community Of Rome, 2,000 Years Old, Lost Half In Nine-Month German Reign

The Jewish community of Rome, one of the oldest in the world, lost 46 or 50 per cent of its members during the nine-month reign of German terror in Rome, and those who remain are economically, spiritually and physically prostrate, Prof. Anton Zolli, Chief Rabbi of Rome told the New York Times writer, Herbert L. Matthews.

Professor Zolli was for thirty years Chief Rabbi in Trieste. He was a Professor of Semitic Lore at the University of Padua, the author of many books, a contributor to Orientalist magazines throughout the world and also, at various periods in the past thirty years, the only Jew appointed to work in the Vatican on exegesis of the Old Testament.

That connection with the Vatican, where he is well known, recalled a dispatch of June 16 saying that he had thanked the Holy See "from his pulpit for the way in which the Vatican and priests had protected Jews during the terror. The story was not true, Professor Zolli said.

"What the Vatican did will be indelibly and eternally engraved on our hearts," he said. "The church was superhuman. Priests and even high prelates did things that will forever be an honor to Catholicism. However, I did not preach that sermon and they knew at the Vatican that I would not do such a thing.

"As a matter of simple delicacy, my duty was to thank the Holy See in person and leave it to them to publish what they wanted. They still have relations with the German Government. It must be remembered also that the Germans held many Italian Jews as hostages. I do not wish to make their position worse.

"Out of Rome's total Jewish population of 11,500 or 11,600," Professor Zolli added, "fully 4,000 and probably more have been deported. Of that number we know that at least 100 and maybe 200 have been killed. The Germans never gave us any indication where they were taken, which was the maximum of cruelty.

"During my thirty years as Chief Rabbi in Trieste I had seen to minister the whole martyrology of a Jewish community, as I knew what Rome had to expect. The president of the community here was Ugo Foa, a magistrate about 60 years old, whom I do not blame for having been a Fascist, because he was a young man when through a chain of expropriations and transfers of title, Dr. Tenenbaum suggested creation of a Bank for Liquidation of Jewish Property, Claims under the jurisdiction of the Jewish Agency for Palestine.

Where legal owners no longer could be found, Jewish property in occupied countries would revert to the "Jewish people as such" and would be handled by the bank. The American Federation of Polish Jews would represent Polish Jews within such a body.

Turning to post-war relief activities within Poland, Dr. Tenenbaum declared that "Polish Jews should be served by Polish Jews." The Federation soon will deported by the Germans. While he was in hiding, Rabbi Zolli, on whose head the Nazis placed a price of 300,000 lire, wrote propaganda leaflets in German and Italian, urging Axis troops to surrender to the Allies.

The synagogue from which the broadcast will take place is in the centre of the old Roman ghetto, on the banks of the Tiber. A modern structure, it was built at the turn of this century. It stands on the side of an ancient synagogue, for the Jewish community of the Italian capital is one of the oldest in the world. The building of the synagogue came at a time when Jews were enjoying equal rights with all other Italian citizens. One of their co-religionists, Ernesto Nathan, served as Mayor of Rome from 1907 to 1913.

Commencing on Polish-Jewish relations in the United States, Dr. Tenenbaum criticized the failure of the recent convention of Polish-American organizations in Buffalo "to mention the horrible slaughter of three million Jews in Poland."

Dr. Tenenbaum placed the federation on record as favoring full understanding between Poland and the Soviet Union as "the sine qua non of the very existence of a free Poland."

DEATHS

Rabbi A. S. Dubitsky died on Saturday, July 1, at his home, 4845 Hutchison Street, in his eighty-third year. His wife was the late Pauline Lernblatt. He is survived by two sons, Professor Aaron Dubitsky, of Jamaica, N. Y., and Moses Dubitsky, of South Africa; four daughters, Mrs. Johanna Kollenberg, of South Africa; Mrs. David Silver (Anna); and Misses Betty and Minnie Dubitsky, of Montreal. Funeral services took place from Congregation Chevra Kadisha, Rabbi Hirsch Cohen, Rabbi S. H. Herschorn, Rabbi M. Wachtfogel, Rabbi N. Afremovitch, Rabbi B. Goldzweig, Rabbi P. Yogel, Rabbi P. Hirshprung, Rabbi C. Denburg, and Reverend M. Mandelcorn officiating. Burial was in Chevra Kadisha cemetery. Shiva was at the home. Rabbi Dubitsky was an outstanding representative of a disappearing generation of Jewish scholars. He was born in a small town near Vilna, Russia, in 1860, of a poor Jewish worker's family. At the age of twelve, he became an orphan, and in spite of extreme poverty, lack of educational facilities and real guidance, he succeeded in acquiring a high standard of learning. He became known as a distinguished scholar through his contributions to various Jewish scientific publications. He was a person of general broad educational background, and was conversant with world literature. In addition, Rabbi Dubitsky knew Yiddish, Hebrew, Russian, German, and Polish. He was particularly interested in furthering Jewish education and established a number of schools in various communities. He was extremely modern in his viewpoint regarding educational principles, and forty years ago introduced in the schools under his supervision mixed classes of boys and girls with equal educational instruction. Rabbi Dubitsky was a delegate to the first Russian Zionist conference in Minsk in 1901, and since then he was a life-long and devoted member of the Zionist movement. Most of his life was spent as a Rabbi of a number of Jewish communities in Kurland, a former Russian province, known as Latvia. During the first World War, in 1915, he was expelled from Kurland together with the entire Jewish population, by order of the Czarist government. He settled in Petrograd as a Rabbi of a large Jewish congregation, and at the time of the Russian revolution, he was one of the first Jewish military chaplains appointed by the Kerensky regime. After the war and revolution, he left Europe and settled in Montreal, where he was instrumental in organizing and founding the Jewish Community Council to which he was elected as a member of the Rabbinical Council. He served as a rabbi of Chevra Kadisha Congregation.

Jacob Prinsky, died on July 8, at his home, 629 Main Street, Avoca, Pa. He is survived by his wife; two sons, Harold B. Prinsky, of Montreal, and J. L. Prinsky, of Merchantville, N. J.; two daughters, Mrs. M. G. Brandt, of Avoca, Pa.; and Mrs. M. Storch, of New Castle, Pa.; and six grandchildren.

Beatrice Holtzman, aged fifteen, died on June 29, at the Jewish General Hospital. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Holtzman, and a sister, Julia. Funeral services took place from Paperman's. Burial was in the Polish Russian cemetery. Shiva was at the home, 56 Duluth Street East.

Weshler and Marilyn; one grandson, Harry Cutler; three sisters, Mrs. A. Sobel, Mrs. L. Morris, Mrs. Morris Ratner, all of Montreal; and one brother, David, of Montreal. Funeral services took place from his home, 61 Rue Avenue, Outremont.

Saul W. Decker, former Montreal lawyer and past president of the Eastern Conference of Canadian Lodges of Bnai Brith, died suddenly July 17, in New York, in his 47th year. A son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Decker, of Montreal, Mr. Decker was born here and studied at Mount Royal School, Montreal High School and McGill University, graduating from the latter in law in 1926. He was a member of the Bar of the Province of Quebec from 1926 to 1939. He was a veteran of the Great War, in which he served with the United States Army after taking his officer's course at Columbia University. Mr. Decker was a past president of the Eastern Conference of Canadian Lodges of Bnai Brith and also past president of Mount Royal Lodge No. 729. For the past seven years he lived in New York, where he was an attorney for the Fidelity & Casualty Co., legal department, being one of the few Canadian attorneys admitted to the New York Bar Association. He is survived by his wife, the former Lillian Berman, of New York; three sisters, Mrs. M. Gibson and Miss Rita Decker, of New York; and Mrs. John Levitt, of Montreal; and a brother, S. H. JEWISH COMMUNITY the movement began and he knew no better. I was always anti-Fascist and on the Nazi blacklist for preaching anti-Nazi sermons in Trieste as early as 1933, but I never clashed with Pon until it became a question of life or death for the Jewish community.

"When the Germans arrived Rome on Sept. 8 and 9, I held a conference with him and his entourage, a little clique of Jews who believed as he did. We both spoke Italian, but we could not understand each other. (Pon had driven around Rome ostentatiously in the company of a Gestapo leader, as if to say that Jews had nothing to fear.)

"So, from Sept. 10 to 18 I went to the Synagogue and preached every day to warn the community what was going to happen. I told them that they should scatter, hide and close all their businesses and administrations, and, until advised differently, all public services in temples were to be suspended. There is an old Roman proverb: 'First live, then worship God'—for only the living can praise God.

"However, Pon gave exactly the opposite advice to the community and said that he had had assurances from the authorities. He offered hope, which is 'the last goddess', and they believed him, especially as they had been lulled to security by the fact that the Italians had always treated the Jews well. We have been here for more than 2,000 years and it is difficult for us to think of danger. The whole Italian population has been wonderful to us. They are divine people, but the Germans were another matter.

"They put a price of 300,000 lire on my head—a poor bargain for the Nazis, for I was not worth it. First I took refuge with one Catholic family named Pierantoni who did not know me. The father and son were Partisans and the son was soon caught and shot. I had to hide somewhere else. Then another Catholic family named Falconieri took me in—people who had never heard of me and they treated me like their father and even called me father. Such are the good hearts of the Italians.

"It was a bad period for my people. The Germans made raid after raid. Once they demanded fifty kilograms of gold, in default of which they threatened to seize 300 hostages, and we supplied the gold. Another time they fined us 2,500,000 lire. Their chief act of looting was to seize all the precious manuscript and books in the library of the Italian Rabbinical College. They visited my house seeking valuable silver and brocades from the synagogue, but I had hidden them too well.

"Pon accuses me of having deserved my community, but let me tell you what happened elsewhere in Italy. The rabbis of Modena and Florence stayed with their flocks and were deported. The rabbi of Genoa did the same, and one day the German Elite Guard came to his office. They beat him until he was covered with blood. Then they dragged him to a telephone and made him call the leaders of the community, asking them to come to the temple immediately with all their families. They came in good faith, three generations of them. When all had entered the temple the Germans surrounded it, herded the people into trucks and deported all of them, including the rabbi.

"I am an old, sick man. I could die for my community, but suppose they had taken me and beaten me and burned the soles of my feet? How do I know what I would have done?

"Pon will be taken care of by Colonel Poletti, who is a grand man with an extraordinary intelligence and sense of realism. I have told him that our community is destroyed completely and must be reconstructed from the bottom up. Colonel Poletti understood.

Jewish community were [illegible] great capitalists or business men, as in other countries. Many intermarried with Italian families.

"The Italian Jews accommodated themselves to Fascism, that must be admitted, but they did so as other Italians did and for the same reasons. They could not take the Fascist anti-Semitic laws seriously because nobody enforced them. They have never appreciated the suffering of Jews abroad because the Italians are so wonderful to them, and that is why they listened to Pon and not to me.

"Fascism was not physically ferocious to the Jews until the fall of Mussolini and then it was the German influence."

The rabbi spoke charitably of Mussolini as one who took himself too seriously, thought himself great and let himself be used by others without realizing it. Professor Zolli said that he had never met him and clearly he had no animosity toward him. As a student and thinker, he objected to Mussolini chiefly because he had no program and only a few ideas, which he lost when he came into contact with Hitler. The rabbi's characterization of Mussolini was one of the best that he ever heard, said Matthews:

"Mussolini," he said, "voyaged on the great sea of history without a compass."

Family Aid For Those Able To Pay Is New Development

By Henry S. Hendricks, of New York, President, Jewish Social Service Association

The most important new development in family case work which has occurred in many years is that of extending the experience and helpfulness of family case work to a group who are able to pay. The Jewish Social Service Association, one of the oldest private family agencies in the city, established a fee service to meet this new community need when they opened the Consultation Center at 1819 Broadway on Feb. 15, 1942.

The fundamental change in the development of family case work on a fee basis came about when the public relief agency took over responsibility for helping people who could not support themselves. The family welfare agencies were thus left free to devote themselves to the development of techniques in dealing with all sorts of family difficulties. They had always helped people in financial distress with family problems, and this service was now extended to include these families who were economically self-maintaining.

The Consultation Center was established because so many people said that they needed and wanted this professional skill, provided they were permitted to pay for it.

The Consultation Center is the non-profit fee division of the Jewish Social Service Association, where people now can pay for help in untangling the problems that upset or disrupt their lives.

In its second year the number of individuals and families using the Consultation Center doubled. Its clients include business people, housewives, factory employes, men and women in service, doctors, teachers, defense-plant workers, engineers, students. They are all above the marginal economic group and many are in comfortable financial circumstances. They come through others who have been helped, through the Selective Service System and other war-connected agencies, through physicians and community organizations.

[illegible] problems are intensified by the war —

[illegible] of us, all [illegible] your allies.

In the two years since the Consultation Center was established the whole aspect of the work of the family agency throughout the country has changed, and today twenty-one family agencies in fifteen cities include fee service as part of their work. Thus the trend that you note of greater numbers of people coming to a family agency "to seek solutions for problems that are basically non-economic" is reflected not only in the New York community but nationally.

Through such activities as the Consultation Center there has developed an understanding of the helpfulness of the family agency to the entire community, and with it a realization that family case work service must be available to everyone, regardless of income.

German Savagery Becomes Worse

The New Republic says:

As final defeat comes nearer, the savagery of the Germans becomes worse than ever, if that is possible. They continue to kill Jews from Hungary and other parts of Europe, wholesale. Cases are being recorded where, other methods being too slow and expensive, victims were simply buried alive by the score, and dirt shoveled over them. Both in Greece and in France there have lately been repetitions of Lidice. The entire populations of the Greek village of Distomo and the French village Oradour-sur-Glane have been slaughtered in revenge for guerilla activities. In Greece, the inhabitants were lined up and machine-gunned to death. In France, many people who had taken refuge in a church were locked in and burned to death.

It is obvious that this is pathological behavior, which bears no relation to the acts of normal, civilized human beings. The fact that the Germans behave this way when they know they are soon certain to lose the war, makes it seem all the less like rational action. It is clear that there are many thousands of people in Germany who cannot under any circumstances be treated like normal human beings. What to do with them is a problem which will tax the intelligence of Allied leaders to the utmost.

RUMANIAN REFUGEES

large sums were needed to meet all the requirements of the refugees.

Within the past several days a ninth transport, carrying 730 refugees from Rumania, arrived in Turkey on its way to Palestine. This brings to 1,847 the total number of refugees from Rumania who have found a home in Palestine in recent months.

A War-Time Visit To Palestine

By Professor Norman Bentwich

I had been away from Palestine for three and a half years, since the spring of 1940, but before that I had been in the country part, anyhow, of every year since 1918. The first and strongest impression was of the extraordinary progress and prosperity which has been uninterrupted and indeed stimulated by the war.

In 1940 it was feared that the closing of the Mediterranean to merchant shipping, which cut off the export import trade of Palestine, would mean an economic setback. But, in fact, the enterprise and resourcefulness of the people and the demands of the Army have given a great impetus to production.

The agricultural population in particular, both Jewish and Arabic, are enjoying unparalleled prosperity. They have a ready market and high prices for all that they can grow. A number of fresh Jewish collective and co-operative villages have been planted, and in the older settlements there is visible advance in the amenities of life. It was good to see the continuous planting of woodland and of gardens.

The industrial development is still greater. New factories have sprung up for war purposes and for supplying the country with the manufactured goods which have hitherto been brought to the country, and the old factories have been enlarged. There is no unemployment, either of Jews or Arabs, and, in fact, the shortage of labour is driving up the wages.

Another striking change is the building of fine asphalted motor roads in all parts of the country by the Army. What were previously summer tracks are now open for all vehicles throughout the year. The camps that line the roads will disappear after the war; the roads themselves will remain.

The Jewish population is wholeheartedly engaged in all aspects of the war effort. Although 30,000 of the young men and women are enrolled in the Forces, the output of agriculture and industry has been going up year by year.

The cultural life, too, has flourished, and the fact that Palestinians have had to turn to their own schools and universities for technical and higher education and could no longer go abroad has made for healthy growth. The Hebrew University of Jerusalem has expanded physically more than in any other period. The Rosenblum Building of the Humanities, the Kutcher Museum of Archaeology, and a gymnasium and playground for physical training have been added on Mount Scopus, and down at Rehobot in the plains the agricultural laboratories were set up by the Agricultural Experimental Station. The Department of Agriculture with between thirty and forty students, is in full swing.

So, too, the Technical College at Haifa has expanded, and the Maritime School, which was opened just before the war, has played a valuable part in the training of young Jews both for the Navy and the Merchant Marine. During the war both fishing and boat-building have become important activities in economic life, and they are sure to remain so when the stress of war has passed.

The arts of life as well are fostered as in the days of peace. The Palestine Symphony Orchestra gives its concerts to crowded audiences up and down the country, and its regular visits to Egypt and Syria, where it plays both for the Forces and the civil population, are much appreciated. The Palestine Conservatoire of Music at Jerusalem and other music schools are discovering in the country abundant talent. At the Habimah and Ohel Theatre dramatic companies rival the orchestra in popularity. The output of books, newspapers and reviews, in spite of the shortage of paper, which it is hard to credit, is unabated.

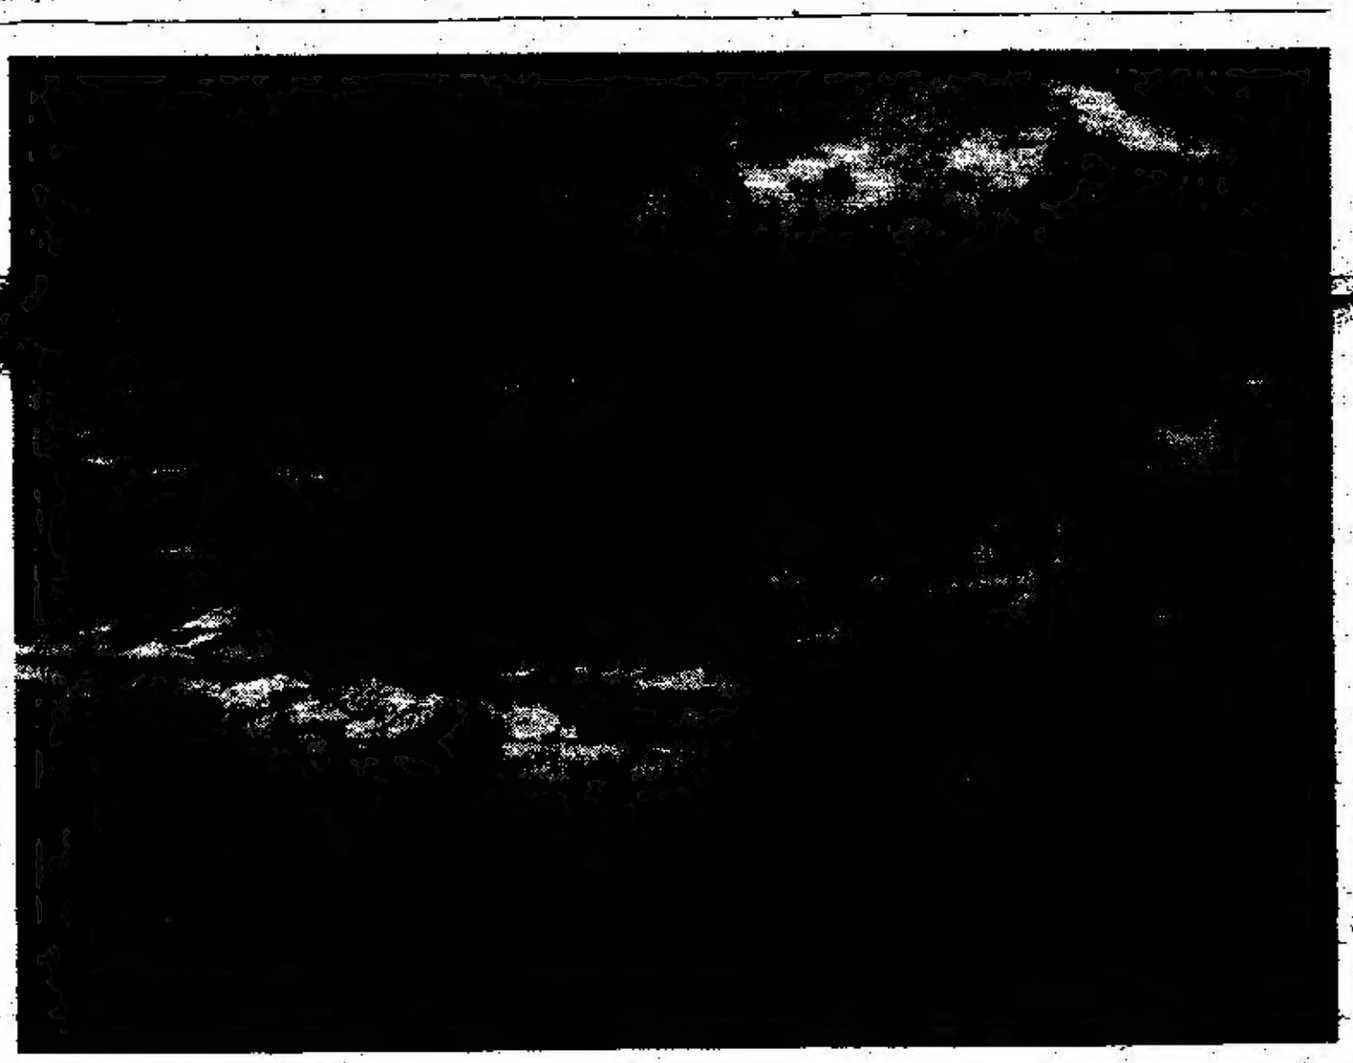
My visit to Ethiopia was a kind of excursion from Palestine, and unexpectedly I found Palestinian links there. Most of the doctors of the British Military Mission, who conduct the hospitals for the Army and also look after the civilian population in the chief towns, are Palestinian Jews. They were enrolled in the Mission by the late Major-General Wingate when he organised the Ethiopian patriot bands, and many of them have now been three years in the country.

Then the Deputy Director of the Medical Services of the Government is a Palestinian Jew. Orthodox in observance and devoted to the communal welfare, he is helping to lead the Jewish congregation in Addis Ababa, which is composed principally of families from the Yemen and Aden. The infant industries which the Emperor's Government has encouraged are directed in considerable measure by Jewish experts from Palestine. They are concerned with textiles, mats and rope.

The Ethiopian people feel themselves part of the semitic religion and are proud of their connexion with the Jewish people and Jerusalem. The Falasha community, which many believe to date back to the earliest dispersion, has been an integral part of the life of the country, and to-day, nine or ten of that community, who have received a modern education, occupy positions in the Government. Professor Tamrat, who is regarded as the leader, speaks Hebrew excellently, and is now the head of the Advisory Committee of the Department of Education. He and the other Jews in Addis Ababa are deeply interested in the University of Jerusalem; and it is one of the hopeful prospects that after the war Ethiopia will be linked up with Palestine, not only economically but also culturally.

Charles A. Duvila, Rumanian ex-Minister to U. S., declared that persecution of Jews in occupied countries could be halted by an announcement that members of their governments would be liable of capital punishment for the death of Jews due to measures taken by them.



CANADA UNLIMITED ON THE SEVEN SEAS

● The Second World War found Canada with a small Merchant Marine and an almost insignificant Navy. Today the White Ensign of the R.C.N. and the Red Ensign of the Merchant Navy of Canada fly proudly over the Seven Seas. Today Canada is one of the leading shipbuilding and shipping countries of the entire world.

To say we're proud and humble about it all is like saying, "We love Canada".

After Victory, the Red Duster of Canada's Merchant Marine will continue to fly the Seven Seas. Canada's ships will ply the world lanes of Commerce. They'll be "Canada" going out to all the world. They'll have "Canada" in their holds. They'll have "Canada" at their helms.

Those steely-eyed, calmly-determined men, who let go depth charges where the oil slicks showed, who dropped out of convoy in the middle of the wolf-pack with engine trouble and a cargo of TNT—those same men will be delivering the goods for Canada in Peace . . . a Canada whose riches will pour out in the form of growing world exports; a Canada Unlimited, whose resources will contribute to the happiness and prosperity of this world-minding, world-leading nation.

Let us do our share towards making this perfect reality, by buying and holding more and more Victory Bonds, War Savings Certificates, and War Savings Stamps. They guarantee our Freedom of the Seas; they are our preferred stock in "Canada Unlimited".
